2014 Auction A Big Success

A nearly $25,000 gross - You guys are amazing!!!

Thank you all so much for your donations and generous spending....it was quite a night!

Thank you to my committee - Janet, Martina, and Lee - who worked the entire night inputting all bids and figuring out individual totals.

-To Tom Allan for helping with check out and the new credit card reader.

-To Arnie and Mary Blaker for the beautiful flower arrangements.

-To our Auctioneers, Jack and Gary, for squeezing every last dime out of us!

-To my wonderful husband Steve for handling the Wine Toss and selling every bottle we had. We made $380! Thank you Andy Campbell for all the wine donations and to everyone who donated a bottle.

-To everyone that helped me set up.. always kind of a nightmare.

I will be contacting those of you who won services, parties, adventures, lessons etc. so you can mutually agree upon a date.

Ingrid's Amazing Posters - There's still time to sign up for one of her posters for $55each. Sahalie Speakeasy, Sahalie Derby, Rock of Ages...all three for $145. They are so beautiful!! Let me know if you want one.

Again a Big THANK YOU to everyone for all your support! This really shows how much we love our Sahalie!!

Lynn Boyle.

The President Speaks

Shawn Gilson

Hello all you Sahalieites!

I want to start off by thanking Rob for getting the Sentinel off right! Looking over the archives I do not see a Spring edition anywhere! With some luck maybe he can get Bruce Kuenzi, Greg Gilson, Ray DeVries or Brad Schrott to give us a little preview into next years Jacket and Ski hat trends?

We closed off last season with a great Carnival so thank you again to Tonya and her crew for putting on a great show!

My usual post-Sahalie season weekend ritual has me lounging around on the couch, stopping by my Schick Shadel for some "treatment" and catching up with friends I totally abandon during the winter months. It's after a few weeks I start to miss seeing all your mugs so this years auction was perfectly timed. Not only was it an excuse for all of us to get together but we went and raised just under $20,000!!!! Amazing! Thank you to Lynn and all those who help organize and run it!!!

The board is busy cooking up ways to get you working so get out and enjoy the nice weather while you can.

Errata, Emenda & Addenda: Sahalie in the 1960s

As noted in my various historical articles, they are all works-in-progress which I hope to continually update as new information and photographs are brought to my attention. So, on this theme, I offer three corrections to my recent article about Sahalie in the 1960s:

- Bill Gue was not the sole builder of the little tow shack, as my photo caption implied. Bobby notes that, "he did his part in procuring the electric motor and system for the new little tow. I know that Ray Adams supplied the block foundation and I am sure there were many more members involved."
- Arnie Boyle was not an architect. (I must have gotten him confused with Arnie Gangnes.) Arnie Boyle worked for Pacific Northwest Bell.
- The marvelous Motives rock band did not originate at Sahalie. Gary Odegard formed that band with some of his Bellevue buddies, and they played gigs in some of the local hotspots while they were still in high school. The Green Weenies band was pure Sahalie.

Let me know if you trip over anything else, or have stories or photos to add. Onward we go as I begin to chip away at the 1970s.

Dave Galvin

Snowboarding is an activity that is very popular with people who do not feel that regular skiing is lethal enough.... I now realize that the small hills you see on ski slopes are formed around the bodies of forty-seven-year-olds who tried to learn snowboarding. ~Dave Barry

Imagine that you just bought a new pair of ski boots. I mean boots that are so remarkable, so lovely to look at, so cool that you can't take your eyes off of them. Now imagine that you are staring at your new boots while standing on your fabulous skis. Notice, though, that you're not standing on the flat ground of a lift line, you're actively moving down a moderately inclined slope. Still and all, you can't take your eyes off of your new boots. This gives you an idea of what it was like to ski on our first day at Schweitzer. Only the fixation with our boots wasn't a reaction to how cool they were but from the thick layer of uncool fog. The fog finally lifted, though, and day 2 was even sunny, for a bit. It was also raining for a bit, windy for a bit, snow-blowning-sideways for a bit— each weather phenomena had a 20 minute layover before moving on to Boise. I was napping during the polar vortex, but I hear it was fantastic.

All in all the long weekend was worth the drive. The snow was well groomed, all lifts were operating and no lift lines. On top of this, the Schweitzer Winter Fest happened. This is where several local and regional breweries set up "tasting" booths.

Climate Change in the NW

Snow-Flakes

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

Out of the bosom of the Air,
Out of the cloud-folds of her garments shaken,
Over the woodlands brown and bare,
Over the harvest-fields forsaken,
Silent, and soft, and slow
Descends the snow.

Not so fast, Henry. The third National Climate Assessment recommends that you update this poem with some words that rhyme with rain.

Since 1950, says the director of the Oregon Climate Change Research Institute, the average spring snowpack in the Cascades has declined about 20 percent. By 2050, he continues, the annual snowmelt is expected to occur three to four weeks earlier, while summer stream flows in much of the region are forecast to drop significantly.

Here's what Longfellow had to say about that:

You're right. This isn't the same Longfellow. Nobody has noticed that so far. You are really on your game today.

Trees

Longfellow

Some leaves are brown
Some leaves are red
The rest are yellow or green
But didicuous trees at the top of chair 2
Are those which should never be seen

Seasonal water patterns shape the life cycles of the region's flora and fauna,

This one is Alfie Longfellow the skituner from Mountain to Sound Outfitters. The "Take a Selfie with Alfie" sale is going on until the end of the month so stop in for smokin' hot deals on all your tuning needs.

Amy Snover, director of the Climate Impacts Group at the University of Washington and a lead author of the regional section. Her portion of the report reminds us that "Snow accumulates in mountains, melting in spring to power both the region's rivers and economy, creating enough hydropower (40% of national total) to export 2 to 6 million megawatt hours per month. Snowmelt waters crops in the interior, helping the region produce commodities, including 55% of potato, 15% of wheat, and 11% of milk production in the United States."

You're right again. Alfie paid me to write that last sentence. In cold, hard, untraceable cash. You can too, btw.

Dick Greenway, one of the pillars of Sahalie Ski Club for 6 decades, passes away.

A contingent of old Sahalie friends joined Don and Brad Greenway and their families for a memorial service for Dick Greenway on April 11th. Dick joined the club in 1940 at age 18 and was one of the stalwart members who rebuilt the lodge after WWII and stayed active through the early years of the new century. As a signal of his dedication to Sahalie, note the photo on the back page of his memorial handout.

D. Richard Greenway a loving husband, father and grandfather was born August 26th, 1922 in Seattle Washington to William E. Greenway and Lillie M. Torkelson.

Dick married Jeanne E. Greenway on July 27, 1944 in Seattle. At the time he was serving in the US Navy as well as finishing his studies at the University of Washington. In April of 1945 their first son, Donald Jr. was born in Seattle. His second son Bradley was born seven years later in April of 1952.

Dick enjoyed camping, boating and snow skiing. He was a lifetime member of Sahalie Ski Club on Snoqualmie Pass. Following retirement Dick and Jeanne enjoyed traveling around the U.S. in their motor home as well as taking many international trips to places including the Caribbean, Great Britain, Europe, Russia, the Near East, South America, China Vietnam and Australia.

Dick passed away on March 13, 2014 in Seattle, Washington at the age of 91. Dick is preceded in death by his wife Jeanne of 67 years, and six of his seven siblings. He is survived by his sons, Donald (Karen) and Bradley (Susan), grandchildren Erin Wilson, Kari Greenway, Christopher Greenway, Gregor Greenway and seven great grandchildren, Sophie, Sear Rachel, David, Amy, Katherine and Benjamin.
